To All Those At The Hockney Foundation

I would like to begin by saying thank you so very much. The impact you have made on our lives is so great that words of thanks hardly seem enough. The amount of financial help you have given has decreased my stress level significantly.

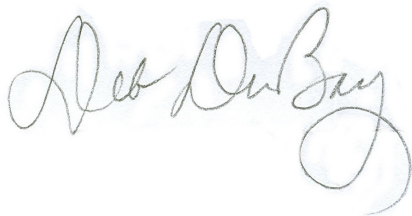

I am sorry that this has taken so long to get to you. I recently experienced a scare over an MRI on the brain. There appeared to be what was thought a lesion. After seeing a radiation oncologist for review and deciding on another MRI to prove it to be wrong. It was wrong, thank God for that. I was to start a new clinical study on that Tuesday, but because of the MRI it was delayed. I am happy to say that I have just started the study this week 2-28-06. Unfortunately, the cancer has progressed more. It has been several months since regular chemo has helped at all. I have used all approved chemotherapy in the last 10 years. This is why now all that is available to me is clinical trials, in hope that one will work. I have already tried one study, but after 7 weeks of treatment CAT scans had shown them not to have worked. I still have a lot of fight in me, always have. My two boys are a great inspiration. I have much faith in the good Lord, for he has gotten me this far.

Knowing that you have us in your thoughts and prayers is a wonderful feeling of support. I could never thank you enough for that. It is a blessing that you have touched our lives. You will always be remembered and appreciated for all you have done. It is a beautiful thing to know there are people in this world still helping and looking out for each other. I pray at night with thanks that you had been directed into my life in time of need. After all you and yours have lost also. That was a sad day. We can only pray for another with hope that a cure will be found to fight this deadly disease. I only hope someday I too may be able to give back something in return.

Millions of thanks to you and yours and God Bless.

Sincerely,

Deborah, Eric and Dylan DuBay
Forever in our prayers of thanks.
